The Town of Chapin has experienced significant growth since the 2000 census, more than doubling its reported population in 2010 with an increase of 817 persons. This growth has been reflected in the other statistics of the town, with the number of housing units and households increasing accordingly. Interestingly enough, while the percentage of households with children have not decreased dramatically (35.7% in 2000 versus 33.0% in 2010) and the percentage of persons under 18 (26.2%) remains larger than the percentage of persons over age 55 (25.5%), the number of households with a single individual 65 years or older has increased substantially since the last census, from 9.2% (in 2000) to 16.3% (in 2010). The racial composition of the town has also changed significantly over the past decade. In 2000, over 90% of the population was recorded as being Caucasian, whereas in 2010 this percentage was 83.1%, and the percentage of African-American residents of the town has almost doubled from 6.4% to 11.7%.
